

Abel Scopelliti | Analyst

Abel is passionate about improving the impacts of public policy on people and communities across Australia. His background in Psychology and Indigenous Australian Studies reflects a strong commitment to supporting communities experiencing health inequities to achieve positive outcomes.

At ARTD, Abel supports a range of evaluations and projects, contributing to mixed-methods design, data collection and analysis, and the synthesis of findings. He is particularly interested in projects focused on public health and is motivated by opportunities to generate insights that can lead to practical, positive change.

I am committed to using fit-for-purpose evaluation approaches to understand how social programs are experienced. I am motivated to ensure the voices of marginalised communities guide decision's shaping public policy.
