

Hannah Rathbone | Consultant

Hannah joined ARTD in 2025 after completing her studies in psychological science. She brings skills in research, analytical thinking, communication, and collaboration, with experience supporting qualitative and quantitative data collection and analysis. She has contributed to coding and thematic analysis of interview data, as well as analysing and visualising survey data using tools such as Excel and R.

As part of the lived experience team, Hannah brings insights from her own experiences to inform her work. She embraces opportunities for professional growth and development to deliver greater value in cross sector evaluations.

I enjoy tackling complex challenges that require deep analysis and strategic thinking and am passionate about weaving information together to develop a comprehensive understanding that aids meaningful change.

Education:

- Bachelor of Psychological Science (Honours), University of Wollongong, 2024

Sector experience: Disability

Hannah is passionate about advocating for the rights and inclusion of people with disabilities and brings her lived experience to evaluations in the sector. She supports the coordination and engagement of lived-experience co-researchers by organising and facilitating meetings and providing project updates to ensure their voices are accurately heard and reflected.

- Evaluation of Department of Social Services Supported Employment Initiatives (Department of Social Services, 2025–2027)
 - Evaluation of Pre-emptive Support Pilots (Department of Health, Disability and Aging, 2025–2027)
 - Service Redesign, Evaluation Design and Evaluation of Autism Connect (Amaze, 2017–2026)

Sector experience: Mental health

Hannah applies a sensitive and trauma-informed approach to mental health evaluations drawing from her studies in psychology. She contributes to literature scans and reviews and supports quantitative data analysis, cleaning and aggregating survey responses and administrative data. Hannah also attends participant interviews, maintaining accurate interview records that reflect the breadth and nuances of stakeholders.
