

Llewellyn Lloyd | Analyst

Llewellyn joined ARTD in 2026 after completing a Bachelor of Science with majors in philosophy and psychology (honours). Through his studies, he developed strong research and analytical skills, applying qualitative and quantitative methods to projects examining neuropsychological signals to behavioural responses.

Llewellyn is passionate about mental health, education and social justice, with a particular focus on creating positive change for underserved communities. His critical thinking skills and analytical rigour allow him to synthesise evidence and support the creation of practical and tangible insights.

I seek to synthesise analysis methods to provide a wholistic and nuanced understanding of complex issues, ultimately empowering individuals and organisation to make impactful change.

Education:

- Bachelor of Science (Philosophy, Psychology Honours), University of Sydney, 2025

Project experience: Data collection and analysis

Llewellyn brings foundational skills in quantitative and qualitative analysis and supports mixed-method projects and evaluations. He is proficient in Qualtrics, R and SPSS, applying these tools to assist with data collection that contribute to project findings and recommendations.
