

Louise Repcik | Analyst

Louise joined ARTD in 2025 and is interested in applying her background in science and economics to evaluation. She is passionate about leveraging evidence-based approaches to design and evaluate sustainability policies and programs that protect ecosystems and promote community wellbeing.

Her previous experience includes work on circular economy initiatives to increase the uptake of recycled materials and asset management, managing water quality monitoring, and conducting carbon data collection to support greenhouse gas reporting and sustainability goals. Louise's skills in sustainability, economics, and conservation give her a unique edge, allowing her to approach problems with multiple perspectives and develop tailored solutions.

Education:

- Bachelor of Science and Bachelor of Advanced Studies (Wildlife Conservation; Environmental, Agricultural and Resource Economics), University of Sydney, 2025

Project experience: Quantitative and qualitative data analysis

Louise has gained strong quantitative and analytical skills through her studies. She is proficient in using R Studio and Geographic Information Systems (GIS) to manipulate, interpret and visualise data trends. Louise has a solid foundation in micro- and macroeconomics, which she applies to evaluate the impacts of policies. At ARTD, she has supported quantitative data analyses through descriptive statistics, visualisations and survey interpretation to identify patterns. For qualitative data, she has coded and conducted thematic analyses on projects across several sectors, drawing on focus groups and interviews to explore the 'how' and 'why' questions for contextual, in-depth understanding.
