

Naomi Agius | Consultant

Naomi joined ARTD in 2025 after completing her studies in communications and international studies. Through her studies in Australia and France, she has developed an inter-cultural understanding of communication and research which she applies to her work in evaluation and public policy.

Naomi is passionate about social justice, education and environmental policy and strives to contribute to positive change in these sectors through her work in evaluation. She is committed to working towards solutions that improve the policies and systems that impact individuals and communities.

Through evaluation, I seek to connect with passionate individuals and communities to help confront complex issues and engage in a process of learning and growth to create positive and meaningful change.

Education:

- Bachelor of Communications (Social and Political Science), Bachelor of Arts, International Studies (France), University of Technology Sydney, 2024

Project experience: Research and data collection

Drawing on her background in social and political science and international studies, Naomi brings skills in both qualitative and quantitative data collection and analysis. At ARTD, she has developed skills in document analysis, thematic and quantitative analysis, synthesising information and report writing.
